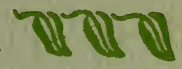
The Undertaker's Horse



By Rudyard Kipling

The Undertaker's Horse

RUDYARD KIPLING

Acc 2014-281

THE UNDERTAKER'S HORSE

KIPLING

"To-tschin-shu is condemned to death. How can he drink tea with the Executioner."—Japanese Proverb.

KIPLING

THE UNDERTAKER'S HORSE

HE eldest son bestrides him,
And the pretty daughter rides him,
And I meet him oft o' mornings on the Course;
And there wakens in my bosom
An emotion chill and gruesome
As I canter past the Undertaker's Horse.

Neither shies he nor is restive,
But a hideously suggestive
Trot, professional and placid, he affects;
And the cadence of his hoof-beats
To my mind, this grim reproof beats:—
"Mend your pace, my friend, I'm coming. Who's the next.

KIPLING

THE UNDERTAKER'S HORSE

AH! stud-bred of ill-omen,
I have watched the strongest go—men
Of pith and might and muscle—at your heels,
Down the plantain-bordered highway,
(Heaven send if ne'er be my way!)
In a lacquered box and jetty upon wheels.

Answer, sombre beast and dreary,
Where is Brown, the young, the cheery,
Smith, the pride of all his friends and half the Force?
You were at the last dread dak
We must cover at a walk,
Bring them back to me, O Undertaker's Horse!

KIPLING

THE UNDERTAKER'S HORSE

ITH your mane unhogged and flowing,
And your curious way of going,
And that business-like black crimping of your tail,
E'en with Beauty on your back, sir,
Pacing as a lady's hack, sir,
What wonder when I meet you I turn pale?

It may be you wait your time, Beast,
Till I write my last bad rhyme, Beast,
Quit the sunlight, cut the rhyming, drop the glass,
Follow after with the others,
Where some dusky heathen smothers
Us with marigolds in lieu of English grass.

KIPLING

THE UNDERTAKER'S HORSE

R, perchance, in years to follow,
I shall watch your plump sides hollow,
See Carnifex (gone lame) become a corse,
See old age at last o'erpower you,
And the Station Pack devour you,
I shall chuckle then, O Undertaker's Horse!

But to insult, gibe, and quest, I've
Still the hideously suggestive
Trot that hammers out the grim and warning text,
And I hear it hard behind me,
In what place soe'er. I find me:—
"Sure to catch you sooner or later
Who's the next?"

KIPLING

LIST OF TITLES :
IN THIS SERIES

Recessional
Betrothed
Gunga Din
Vampire
Mandalay
Fuzzy Wuzzy
Danny Deever
Belts
Tommy
The Undertaker's Horse